The Pop Diva's Sonic "Boom" Shakes Gay Dance Floors

By Tyler White

When Emily Perry's club single, "Boom," remained at #9 on the Billboard's Top Ten club chart for two weeks this summer, it introduced the Aussie actress to a worldwide club audience. Fans loved the unique sound of the track that seemed to harken back to late 80s house while also mixing in today's hi-energy fun.

"It was the pick-me-up track the dance floor needed," said Perry who admits she wrote the song to help her get over feelings of homesickness. The 18-year-old actress and dancer has been living in Los Angeles for a year now, pursuing her pop star dreams. "Being so far away from home, I sometimes feel a little out of place and when I'm down, I need a song I can crank up on my stereo. Something to go crazy to and overcome whatever sadness I may be feeling. That's what 'Boom' does for me, and I love that it's been doing the same for others."

Luckily, she's enjoyed several mind-blowing 'Boom' experiences since making her move to the USA. Among them has been creating and recording music with The Jackie Boyz (whose credits include Justin Bieber, Chris Brown, and Jason Derulo) and Arista recording artist/composer Cindy Valentine. Emily Perry and Valentine co-wrote "Boom" together, as well as her single releasing next month, "Walk in Silence."

Lorde and P!nk are among Emily Perry's top inspirations in music. "Lorde knows how to completely command a stage," she explains. "She has a unique, distinctive sound that is absolutely mesmerizing. Then you look at someone like P!nk and she knows how to do it all. She has killer vocals, she can move, and her entire act is fresh and original."

because she wants her songs to be stories all people can relate to. "We're all riding through life on a rollercoaster of emotions. What I love about music is that it has a way of helping us celebrate the good times and navigate through the hard."

"Boom" follows "Sugarcoated," Emily's debut single that showcased a mellow mid-tempo, contemporary, electronic sound. "I wrote 'Sugarcoated' at a time in my life when I needed the people around me to give it to me straight," she remembers. "There are a lot of yes people in this business and for me to succeed, I need to hear the truth about the songs I create. I want everyone to know I'm a big girl and I can take any criticism."

"Ultimately, I aim to create a variety of music that will appeal to all states of mind," she continues, adding: "I'm so excited for the journey ahead."

"Boom" is available for purchase on iTunes, Amazon, and all other major retailers. It is also available for streaming through Spotify. To learn more about Emily Perry, visit Daumanmusic.com and EmilyPerry.me.
